James Dunn

James Dunn is a doctoral student in the department of Religious Studies at Yale, where he is writing his dissertation on the reception of Aristotle's Ethics in early modern Lutheranism. His protracted academic journey began with an undergraduate degree in English Literature at the University of Oxford, before a switch to the US and to Yale, where he has completed no less than four Master's degrees in Theology over the course of the last ten years. He has been the recipient of several scholarships and awards, including doctoral fellowships through the Louisville Institute, the Baden-Württemberg Stiftung, the Herzog August Bibliothek, and, most recently, the Deutscher Akademischer Austauschdienst. When he finally finishes at Yale, he hopes to become a priest in the Church of England.
